From the Amſterdam Gazette, dated June 6.

Amſterdam, June 6.

A Letter written from Nimes the 14th of laſt Month, gives the following Particulars relating to the Camiſars.

The Marſhal de Villars having given Commiſſions to divers Perſons to treat of an Accommodation with Cavalier, one Monſieur la Combe of Veſenobre being inform'd where he might be found, went to him, and had ſeveral Conferences with him, in which he laid before him many Arguments to perſwade him to lay down his Arms, and accept a Pardon which he was impower'd by the Marſhal de Villars to offer to him. Cavalier yielded to his Perſwaſions, and ſent Catinat one of the chief of his Party to make certain Propoſals to Monſieur de la Lande a general Officer of the King's Troops, on that Subject. The day following, Monſieur de la Lande went with a Party of Men for his Guard to confer perſonally with Cavalier himſelf, and took Cavalier's Brother out of the Priſon of Alets along with him. He found Cavalier near Verſenobre, and with him 800 Men drawn up in Battallia. Monſieur de la Lande drew up his Men into the ſame Order. Then the 2 Leaders went apart, and conferr'd together 2 hours, and agreed on certain Articles that are not yet made publick. Mean time 'tis certain this Affair is brought to an amicable Concluſion, and that the Peace of this Province is upon the Point of being reeſtabliſh'd. Monſieur de la Lande threw a Purſe of 100 Piſtoles to the Camiſars to drink the King's Health. Part of the King's Troops and of the Camiſars mingled together, and went into Veſenobre, where they drank and huzza'd very loyally, and the common Cry was, Long Live the King. Our Troops retir'd to Alets, and the Camiſars march'd into Veſenobre; whither the Peaſants being allow'd to carry them Proviſions, above 2000 have already been with them to furniſh them with all ſorts of Victuals. Hoſtilities are ceas'd on both ſides, and there will be a Suſpenſion of Arms for 10 days, till the return of the Marſhal de Villars's Nephew, who ſet out Poſt yeſterday for the Court, whence he is to bring back the King's Ratification of the Treaty. Monſieur de la Lande arriv'd here this Evening; The Marſhal de Villars, and the Intendant of our Province, are here likewiſe.

'Tis given out, that the Treaty is to this Effect; but there is no certainty of it. I. That there ſhall be a General Pardon. II. That Cavalier and 400 of his Men ſhall have Liberty to depart the Kingdom. III. That all thoſe who have been ſent to America or impriſon'd ſince the War began, ſhall be recall'd and ſet at Liberty. IV. That the confiſcated Eſtates and Goods ſhall be reſtor'd to the Perſons from whom they were taken, or to their Heirs. There are other Articles talk'd of, but with no certainty, particularly that Cavalier demands Liberty of Conſcience, which no body believes the King will grant.

Amſt. June 5. Some Advices from Nimes of the 20th of laſt Month, ſay, the 2 Expreſſes ſent by the Marſhal de Villars to the King, touching the Camiſars, are not yet return'd. And that in the mean time the Suſpenſion of Arms is prolong'd 8 days more.

From the Paris Gazette a la Main, dated May 31.

Paris, May 31. Cavalier has had a perſonal Conference with the Marſhal de Villars at Nimes, and carried himſelf very ſubmiſſively. He has promis'd to bring 3000 of the Camiſars to Cayiſſon, and that they ſhall all lay down their Arms and ask Pardon for their Rebellion.

From the Camp at St. George's near Fribourg, May 20. The laſt of the Recruits and other Succours for the King's Army in Germany, joyn'd the Elector of Bavaria to day. This important and difficult Enterprize, was carry'd on with ſo much Prudence, Secrecy, Order, and Diligence, that it was executed without any loſs, notwithſtanding the Precautions taken by the Enemy and the difficulty of the Paſſage. The Marſhal de Tallard ſent 45 Boats for making Bridges into the lower Alſatia. The Sieur de Laubanie Governour of Landau, poſted himſelf at Germerſheim with a Body of 7 or 8000 Men, and a great Train of Artillery. The Troops led by the Count de Coignies, made a ſhew of Marching that way, and the Army commanded by the Marſhal de Tallard was order'd to move down the Rhine likewiſe. Theſe Preparations oblig'd the Enemy to draw off part of the Troops they had on the other ſide the Black Forreſt, to reinforce the Guard of the Lines of Stohlhoffen, and of the ſide of the Rhine. At the ſame time, the Troops and Recruits that were to paſs into Germany, drew together at Neubourg, and the Marqueſs of Courtebonne kept with a flying Camp on the other ſide of the Rhine over againſt Hunninghen, to give the Enemy Umbrage on the ſide of the Forreſt Towns and the Lake of Conſtance. Mean time the Elector of Bavaria broke up from Ulm the 4th with an Army of 30000 Men, and march'd with ſo great Diligence, that the 13th he arriv'd within 8 Leagues of the head of the Danube, the Enemies in ſurprize retiring and abandoning their Lines as he advanc'd. The ſame day (the 13th) the Troops commanded by the Marqueſs of Courtebonne, and the Recruits, mov'd down the ſide of the Rhine, and the Forces led by the Marſhal de Tallard and the Count de Coignies drew to the Bridges of Briſac and Rhinau, where they paſs'd the Rhine. The firſt arriv'd the 14th at St. George near Friburg, and the other at Langendentzling at the Entrance of the Valley of Waldkirch, where there is a way up into the Black Forreſt. The ſame day the Marſhal de Tallard caus'd a Paſſage to be clear'd to the Right, which led into the Valley of St. Peter. The 15th he order'd a Detachment of Grenadiers, 10 Men of each Troop of Horſe or Dragoons, and 110 Men of each Battallion, to march under the Command of the Sieur de Zurlauben and encamp at Kilchzatten. The 16th the right Wing of the Horſe and 2 Brigades of Foot march'd into the Sieur de Zurlauben's Camp, and he himſelf advanc'd with his Detachment towards the Hill of Torner, ſituate in the middle of the way the Army was to paſs, and upon it was a Fort which the Enemy had abandon'd, as well as ſeveral other Intrenchments and Redoubts; 2 Regiments of the Enemy abandon'd likewiſe the Abbey of St. Peter, with ſo great Precipitation, that they left Arms, Ammunition, Tents, Drums, and Cloaks behind them. The Marſhal de Tallard, who march'd after the Sieur de Zurlauben and joyn'd him, caus'd Guards to be put into thoſe Poſts for the Security of 500 Waggons that were to follow the Recruits. The Marqueſs of Courtebonne, to favour the Paſſage of thoſe Waggons, went and encamp'd at Cappel at the Neck of the Valley of Fribourg, and the 17th mov'd to Falckenſteigh, whither the Waggons came, came, having pass'd by Fribourg in the Night-time unmolested. These Waggons were loaded with Arms, Ammunition, Cloaths, Provisions and Money, for the Army and for the Elector of Bavaria. The 16th his Electoral Highness came to Doneschingen, where the Marshal de Tallard made him a Visit. The Marshal tarried with him till the 18th, and yesterday rejoyn'd his Army at Torner, and to day return'd with them to this Camp. The Recruits and Succours that pass'd the Hills, consist of 12000 Foot, 3000 Horse, and 1000 Officers.

From the Leiden Gaz. and Harl. Cour. dated June 5.

Paris, May 28. An Express from the Marshal de Villeroy has brought Advice to the Court, that the English Army commanded by the Duke of Marlborough is Marching with all expedition towards the Danube. This March has broken the Measures taken for this Campaign on the Moselle, and the Rhine; and a Courier is sent back to the M. de Villeroy with Orders, 'tis said, to continue his March towards the Upper Rhine. 'Tis said likewise that Orders are sent to the M. de Tallard to stay in the Valley of St. Peter, and keep open a Communication with the Elector of Bavaria. The M. de Villars has written to several of his Friends, that he is not sure of concluding an accommodation with the Camisars, because they insist on some Demands which he believes the King will not grant; particularly that they may march out of the Kingdom in a Body, with their Arms, unless the King will give them such Hostages as they shall think sufficient for their Security.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated June 6.

Letters from Srutgard of the 30th of May advise, That the Prince of Baden is encamp'd near Storkach, having the Enemies before him. The Enemies have Hohenweil behind them, the Lake of Constance on their Right, and vast Mountains on their Left; so that they are in a manner coup'd up in a narrow spot of Ground, and we expect with great Impatience to hear how they will extricate themselves: Mean time Provisions grow very scarce, and there are frequent Skirmishes between the Parties of both sides.

They write from the Upper Rhine the 1st instant, that Prince Eugene of Savoy is expected on the Danube; and that 'tis believ'd on his Arrival there, the Prince of Baden will go and take upon him the Command of the Army on the Rhine, to hinder the Enemies from making any Attempt there, while the Elector of Bavaria is attack'd on all sides with the utmost Vigour.
